New Mediterranean Food Cookbook Sizzles with Surprising Flavors and Savory Secrets

Pure olive oil. Lots of limes. Few batters, coatings, or rubs. No tahini in that hummus. Instead, an imaginative, personal, and highly memorable take on enhancing natural flavors.

Chef Gorji, an engineer-turned-chef passionately blends science and Old World “hot and cold” theories, creating unexpected ways to combine ingredients. Often going against the grain of traditional culinary practices, he likes shorter cooking times, uses few spices and very little or no sugar. Add flavor with ingredients such as pomegranates, sumac, and barberries.

Gorji’s cookbook shows how to add boldness with user-friendly recipes, flavorful ingredients and simple techniques.
